Have you seen this pop up? You can protect your legal rights by opting out of Big Fish's arbitration clause.

The pop-up window has a blue border and a purple gradient background. It features the text "Big Fish Terms Of Use" in large, bold, white letters. Below this, there is a detailed paragraph about the arbitration clause, mentioning "Dispute Resolution By Binding Arbitration". At the bottom, it says "Available here".

Jennifer Winton According to the terms of you opt out you can't play on the app.

2w

Sara Brown You can play if you opt out. I've not only read the fine print, the court transcripts where the judge said so, and the court transcripts where big fish said so, but I've also spoken with the attorneys just to be 100% sure. And I am absolutely certain you CAN STILL PLAY if you opt out.

Sara Brown If you want a refund you HAVE TO OPT OUT. The opt out letter is to say "I don't agree to give up my rights to sue and get a refund"

Kim Beauregard Have to okay this or won't let you play

2w

Sara Brown Hi Kim, yes.. that's what the Edelson website is all about. The opt out is to say "even though I clicked agree I don't really agree" Opting out makes it so it's like we never agreed. We can still get a refund if bf loses the lawsuit AND we can still play the game.

2w

W Allen Jones Arbitration clauses are favored under federal law.

2w

Sara Brown True as that may be, that is only when it's in the best interest of all parties involved. Arbitration is ONLY IN BIG FISH'S best interest in this situation. As it stands, if a consumer has an issue with big fish they can settle that issue in arbitration at THEIR OWN EXPENSE where they'd have to PAY $250 just to start the arbitration. Plus they'd have to pay all their own travel expenses and such. And they'd be taking on an entire corporation with a team of VERY EXPENSIVE AND KNOWLEDGEABLE attorneys....good luck winning in arbitration after you've fished out all that money to arbitrate. Next option, is to sue as an individual...which means hiring your own lawyer AT YOUR OWN EXPENSE to take on big fish's team of VERY EXPENSIVE lawyers. So, as wealthy as some of big fish's customers may be....I doubt many have the funds to take on a BILLION DOLLAR CORPORATION. And the final option is a class action lawsuit. In a class action lawsuit, the individuals NEVER pay a penny out of pocket and COLLECTIVELY join with all of the other players and team up against big fish....which gains the interest of big law firms like Edelson who say "we'll take the case on a contingency basis" meaning they don't charge a dime unless they win the case they are awarded their fees once the case is settled! BY AGREEING TO BIG FISH'S ARBITRATION CLAUSE AND NOT OPTING OUT, ppl are eliminating themselves from ever being a part of a class action lawsuit and are essentially eliminating themselves from EVER being able to fight big fish and get any money back EVER! Because unless someone is a BILLIONAIRE they cannot possibly afford to arbitrate with big fish or sue big fish independently. So yes, while courts DO want ppl to work things out in arbitration IF THEY CAN BE WORKED OUT IN ARBITRATION the courts DO NOT want ppl to give up their rights and simply roll over to these big corporations.

Sara Brown And btw, the pop up was issued on January 21st! We only have 30 days to opt out! So if you haven't done so already, please do so in order to retain your rights. You won't be giving up your right to arbitration and you're not hiring Edelson by doing so....you're merely keeping your right to join a class action now or in the future.
